

Dr. Greg L. Finch

Biosketch

Greg L. Finch DMin, MDiv, MTS, BED www.WildGeeseAmongUs.com

Greg L. Finch serves as the director for learning initiatives for WildGeeseAmongUs—a multi-disciplinary consulting practice that collaboratively designs and delivers thriving adult learning, community engagement, and professional enrichment programs and initiatives. These initiatives consistently bring discipline-bridging expertise that empowers community, academic, healthcare, cultural, social impact, nonprofit, and humanitarian sectors.

As a peer-recognized organizational strategist, educator/trainer, program facilitator, leadership mentor, and outreach director Greg has designed and facilitated programming, retreats and workshops, education forums, symposia, and outreach events that energize membership, workforce, and leadership constituencies; build and sustain collaborative grassroots, partner, and volunteer networks; and foster thriving social impact, change, and innovation initiatives

As the former Director of Field services for the National Center for Creative Aging (NCCA) Greg Led NCCA local, regional, national, and global initiatives as a catalyst, convener and connector to equip individuals and organizations flourish across the lifespan through creative expression. And as Associate for Collaborative Projects at the Washington National Cathedral Greg designed and managed adult learning, leadership development, and community engagement initiatives that creatively address social, wellness, and humanitarian challenges.

Greg holds adjunct faculty positions at Georgetown University School of Theology, the George Washington University School of Medicine and Behavioral Sciences, and the George Mason University Center for the Advancement of Well-Being. He also holds his doctorate in medicine, spirituality, and aesthetics along with degrees with honors in architecture, arts management, and spirituality from Princeton Theological Seminary, Wesley Theological Seminary, American University, and Texas A&M University.